Victim assistance:
A dilemma for the States Parties

"In many mine affected countries the assistance available to address the needs of survivors is inadequate."
-- ICBL 2004

"The extent to which landmine survivors' needs are not being met is generally still unknown."
-- ICBL 2004
Victim assistance: Understanding the aim

Victim as defined by the States Parties:

- “Those who either individually or collectively have suffered physical or psychological injury, economic loss or substantial impairment of their fundamental rights through acts or omissions related to mine utilization.”
- A broad approach to what is considered a landmine victim has been accepted.
- However, the majority of attention has been focused on providing assistance to those individuals directly impacted by mines.
- These individuals have specific needs for assistance.

Victim assistance, defined by the States Parties:

- Understanding the extent of the challenges faced
- Emergency and continuing medical care
- Physical rehabilitation, including physiotherapy, prosthetics and assistive devices
- Psychological support and social reintegration;
- Economic reintegation
- The establishment, enforcement and implementation of relevant laws and public policies
Victim assistance: Understanding the broader context

Victim assistance in the context of disability:

- Survivors are a sub-group of larger communities of persons with injuries and disabilities.
- The problems faced by landmine survivors are similar to the challenges faced by other persons with injuries and disabilities.
- Landmine victim assistance should not exclude any person injured or disabled in another manner.

Victim assistance in the context of health care, social services, rehabilitation, reintegration and human rights:

- Victim assistance does not require the development of new fields or disciplines.
- Landmine victim assistance should be viewed as a part of a country's overall public health and social services systems and human rights frameworks.
- These systems and frameworks should be made adequate to meet the needs of all citizens — including landmine victims.
Victim assistance: Understanding responsibility

- Each State Party in a position to do so has a responsibility to support mine victims.
- It is a basic responsibility of a State to ensure the well-being of its population.
- This responsibility is most pertinent for those States that are responsible for significant numbers – hundreds or thousands – of landmine survivors.
- While not forgetting the responsibilities to landmine victims wherever they may be, a greater emphasis must be placed on the fulfilment of the responsibilities to landmine victims by these States Parties.

26 States Parties have indicated that they have a responsibility for significant numbers of landmine survivors:

Afghanistan
Albania
Angola
Bosnia and Herzegovina
Burundi
Cambodia
Chad
Colombia
Croatia
DRC
El Salvador
Eritrea
Ethiopia
Guinea Bissau
Iraq
Jordan
Mozambique
Nicaragua
Peru
Senegal
Serbia
Sudan
Tajikistan
Thailand
Uganda
Yemen

Victim assistance
Understanding the challenge, health care, physical rehab, psychological support & social reintegration, economic reintegration, legal / policy framework. Does not require the development of new fields or disciplines. Requires that public health and social services systems and human rights frameworks are adequate to meet the needs of all citizens — including landmine victims.

Affected States Parties can / should set the agenda:

- What in concrete terms do you want to achieve by when?
- Is what you want to achieve SMART? (Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant, Time-Bound)
- Are all relevant ministries engaged in establishing SMART objectives and developing plans?
- What is your plan to achieve what it is you want to achieve?
- Do your plans take into account the place of landmine victim assistance in broader contexts?
10 steps in developing a national response

1. Sensitise relevant ministries to Convention obligations.
2. Establish an inter-ministerial group, inclusive of survivors and civil society organisations, to oversee the process.
3. Assign responsibility to various ministries according to competence.
4. Organise a national workshop to begin a situation analysis and to develop goals.
5. Complete the situation analysis, establishing an inventory of who is doing what, and, what plans and strategies are already in place.
6. Review the situation analysis to project what the situation should look like in the future.
7. Establish SMART objectives.
8. Organise a second workshop to seek views on the development a national plan.
9. Complete a plan, taking into account plans and budgets of existing ministerial activities.
10. Mobilise resources, ensuring integration into broader appeals for development assistance.

Victim Assistance: progress

2009 – Pretoria
- Strategic effort to apply these conclusions
- VA largely treated analogous to other obligations
- Sovereign States logically ultimately responsible
- 26 States Parties with significant responsibilities
- Better data on survivors, SMART objectives
- NGOs can now critique relative to a benchmark
- Convention’s practices the model for the CCM
Victim Assistance: challenges

Challenges to address at Cartagena Summit

- Individual States continue to take responsibility
- Translating responsibility into a difference on the ground
- VA in the context of broader disability and human rights
- Applying a gender perspective to victim assistance
- Inclusion of survivors and other persons with disabilities

Thank you!
